There are four significant transitions that occur for all students. These transitions are:

- from home to school,
- from grade to grade,
- from school to school, and
- from school to community.

For students with diverse needs, transition planning is essential and can make a significant difference in student success.

With schools currently closed, many families and support teams may be concerned about how children will transition for the next school year. Please know that the supports and services your child has been receiving will continue, although some may be limited. Services such as the Autism Intervention Services (AIS) will continue to work with receiving schools to help prepare for incoming Kindergarten students.

Educators are working with each other to share information and are updating PLPs to support successful transitions between grades and schools. High schools and post-secondary institutions are working together to support new graduates’ entrance to universities and colleges.
