Repayment Assistance Plan

The Repayment Assistance Plan (RAP) and the Repayment Assistance Plan for Borrowers with a Disability (RAP-D) help borrowers manage their federal and provincial student loans by allowing them to pay back what they can reasonably afford. If you are eligible for repayment assistance, an affordable payment will be calculated based on your family size, your family income and how much you owe on your student loans. For borrowers with disabilities, additional disability-related expenses may also be considered.

You could be eligible for RAP if:
• you reside in Canada (or are on an international internship or are a reservist deployed abroad);
• you are currently repaying a provincial and/or federal loan;
• your loans are in good standing; and
• you meet the income threshold for the program

If you have a disability, you may qualify for RAP-D if:
• your disability has been assessed and recognized by the Canada Student Financial Assistance Program; and
• you are eligible for the Repayment Assistance Plan.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE PLAN

• Monthly payments are limited to no more than 10% of your gross family income.
• If you earn very little income, you may not be required to make loan payments until your income increases.

HOW TO APPLY

To apply for repayment assistance, you can complete an online application through your National Student Loans Service Centre (NSLSC) online services account (you must register for an online account first if you do not have one already).

If you are applying for RAP-D and would like your disability-related expenses or exceptional expenses to be considered, you must complete and submit a RAP-D Disability Related Expenses Form with your application.

RAP/RAP-D approvals are for six-month periods. If financial difficulties persist, you may re-apply for RAP/RAP-D every six months.

For more information on RAP or RAP-D, contact the NSLSC at 1-888-815-4514 or go to the following website: www.canada.ca/student-financial-assistance.
