As the phenomenal Bay of Fundy, One of the Marine Wonders of the World, is filled twice daily by some of the highest tides on the planet, these beacons from the past stand tall and full of mystery along the rugged coast. Once trusted tools for safe navigation, lighthouses are now windows into a nautical past, filled with folklore and stories of shipwrecks, heroism, and even some say… ghosts! The Fundy Coastal Drive serves as one of the best routes to experience the beauty and grandeur of these stunning landmarks.

History

In 1791, New Brunswick’s first lighthouse was built on Partridge Island at the entrance of the Saint John Harbour. Since then, millions of sailors, and immigrants from Europe, have landed on our New Brunswick shores, guided safely by lighthouses and welcomed to their new homeland. A great number of these stately structures, such as Mulholland Point on Campobello Island, were constructed with tapering wooden towers which were cheap to build and could be moved if threatened by erosion.

Today, 50 lighthouses remain standing in New Brunswick, with half of them located on the Fundy Coastal Drive. New Brunswick’s picturesque lighthouses come in all shapes and sizes, and can even be found on inland rivers.

Did you know?

• New Brunswick has the only remaining staffed lighthouses left in the Maritimes (on tiny Machias Seal Island off Grand Manan Island).

• New Brunswick has the second largest number of accessible lighthouses to visit in all of Canada.

• The Bay of Fundy lighthouses are known as “sea lights”. Lighthouses dotting New Brunswick’s inland shorelines are called “beacon lights”.

• The East Quoddy Lighthouse on Campobello Island and Swallowtail on Grand Manan Island are among the most photographed in the world.

• Cape Enrage Lighthouse sits atop the cliffs of one of the most beautiful views in Canada (Frommer’s Guide).

• The lower St. John River is one of the few places in Canada with an inland system of lighthouses, built to safely guide the old paddlewheeler steamers along the river.
